Dear Colleagues,

The King George’s Medical University is organizing an Infectious Disease Update 2016 on 2nd - 3rd April, 2016 at Scientific Convention Centre at King George’s Medical University, Lucknow, India.

About Lucknow

Lucknow, the city of “Nawabs” boasts of many scientific and historical institutions, like the Indian Institute of Toxicological Research (IITR), Central Drug Research Institute (CDRI), National Botanical Research Institute (NBRI), Imambaras and Shahid Smarak to name a few. The conference would be held at Scientific Convention Centre of the prestigious King George’s Medical University, which has more than 100 years of glorious history (1911-2016).

Lucknow is known for its art, culture, warmth and famous for its “Tahzeeb” of “Pehle Aap”. It is known world over for its “Chikan-kari” - Hand Embroidery. The Lucknow Gharana of Kathak Dance evolved here. Tunday Kabab and Kakori Kababs are mouth watering delicacies.

About the Update

Over the years, considerable progress has been made in area of management of various types of infections in admitted patients. But there is still a long way to go in addressing issue effectively and efficiently. Knowledge regarding potential tangible and intangible benefits arising due to a system of management of infections in a critically ill / immuno - compromised host is the need of the hour.

The present update has been proposed as a platform to experts for exchange of ideas, concepts, current available evidence and preventable solutions in a cost constrained set-up.

It will be a stage to appraise the road traveled thus far in this context, identify the roadblocks ahead and formulate a plan to surmount them. We look forward to an enthusiastic participation from all committed to better healthcare.
