The MFD RCSI is an examination that can be taken by dentists at any stage of their career: for example, newly qualified, those hoping to undertake specialist training, those working in general practice. The examination does not require specialist knowledge: what is expected is that which would be reasonably expected of a dental school graduate with 1-2 years post-qualification experience.

The examination places a strong emphasis on clinical dentistry, with some questions on the underlying relevant clinical sciences.

The examination consists of two parts. Part 1 MFD RCSI is a 3 hour written examination involving MCQ and SBA questions; please refer to the regulations for information on the syllabus and information on Part 2 MFD RCSI.
